Healthcare management engineering training. As the healthcare industry strives to deliver value to its customers for more efficient operations, quality customer service, and improved processes that limit costs and increase profitability, the Society for Health Systems and the Institute of Industrial and Systems Engineers have developed seminars that apply industrial engineering skills and tools in the healthcare environment.

This series of seminars focuses on two types of management engineering courses. The first provides you with the basics of the industrial engineering toolbox as applied to healthcare and introduces you to the fundamental management skills required for demanding tasks in this industry. The second shows how to apply the lean and Six Sigma toolbox within the healthcare environment.

What Is SHS?
The Society for Health Systems (SHS) is a professional association that focuses on the needs and resources of health systems professionals and leaders like you who are charged with improving healthcare processes.

Why Should I Join SHS?

When you’re one of the few performance improvement specialists or management engineers in your organization or site, it’s even more challenging to produce results. You need to rely on a wide network of colleagues, experts, and resources outside your own organization.

The Society for Health Systems provides that.

SHS offers you the very latest and best process analytics, tools, techniques, and methodologies for performance improvement. At SHS you will network with peers and learn how to improve performance in your healthcare organization.

As we enter an era of increasing public focus on the clinical performance of our healthcare system, SHS is growing and changing to respond to your needs. You will choose from timely web and conference sessions, access a wealth of online resources, and draw on the expertise of industry leaders.

By becoming an SHS member now, you will benefit from the growing resources available to members ... and you can help shape the future of our healthcare improvement profession.
